COTTAGE TULIPS

Old English Garden Tulips Lovely May Flowering Sorts

The Cottage Tulips owe their name to the fact that many of them have been found growing in the gardens of the country houses and cottages in England and France. All colors are represented, from the most delicate pastels to the most brilliant reds. As all have long stems, they are excellent for cut flowers and are unsurpassed for garden decoration; many are deliciously perfumed. Cottage Tulips are better suited for naturalizing than any other class, blooming over a period of years without replanting.

CULTURE. Plant during October and November and until the ground freezes up; set the bulbs 4 or 5 inches apart and cover 4 to 5 inches. Bone Meal is the best fertilizer for Tulips. (See page 22).

Single Early Tulips

The Gay and Friendly Early Flowers

This class gives us the first bright flowers in spring. Of the spring blooming plants, few, if any, rival the Single Early Tulips for brilliancy of color or ease of culture. Because of the uniformity of their height and upright stems, they lend themselves to formal bedding and mass planting or for garden borders. For cemetery planting they are preferred.

CULTURE. Set out the bulbs during October and November, and until the ground freezes up, 4 to 5 inches apart, and cover 4 inches. Bone Meal is the best fertilizer for Tulips.

TULIPS INDOORS

Tulips may easily be grown in the house in pots for winter blooming. Fill the pots half full of good soil and then set in the bulbs and cover even with the top. They should be kept in a cold, sheltered place, but not allowed to freeze. After a few weeks they may be brought into the house as wanted.

Your Lily Garden

Lilies are becoming increasingly popular and may be grown successfully by any gardener. They bring charm to the garden quite different from that of any other flower. You may have cool whites, rich yellows and dazzling scarlets. Lilies may be had in bloom from early summer until fall by proper selection of varieties.

Orders will be filled as soon as bulbs arrive from abroad or are thoroughly matured in case of native sorts and should be planted as soon as you receive them.

Varieties marked (*) will not be ready until November or early December.

It is advisable to prepare your Lily bed early in the autumn and cover with 3 or 4 inches of litter. This will keep the ground from freezing and permit the planting of the late-maturing kinds, which frequently do not arrive until after hard frost.

Hardy Lilies

If you have a partially shaded spot in your yard—perhaps in among the shrubs—that is fairly well drained, plant Lilies in it. Lilies will fill up that space and make it a pleasing sight every day in the summer.

Plant Lilies informally in clumps or large masses. Place the bulbs 4 to 8 inches deep (depending upon variety and size of bulbs) with a handful of sand around each one, so that the water will easily run off. The soil should be well enriched. Water copiously during dry weather.

Good and easy drainage is essential. Some Lilies produce large bulbs, such as Auratum, whereas many others will never make such a large bulb, as for example the Tenuifolium. This must be taken into consideration when setting out the bulbs.

The Following Lilies Produce Much Smaller Bulbs Than the Sorts Listed on Preceding Page.

LILIUM CANADENSE (The Meadow Lily). With beautiful, drooping, bell-shaped flowers of yellow, spotted with crimson; red anthers; up to ten flowers to each stem; graceful and pretty.
